FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR

This design is of Old English farmhouse type, now so popular. Its walls are rough case on metal lath set on heavy wood studs and the beam work is heavy stained like old chestnut or oak. Plain heavy posts to the piazza and plain battened shutters at the lower windows, with the diamond paneled sash having an old time, quaint effect. The roof is shingled or may be tiled, though, of course this last means additional expense. The large square living hall has a beamed ceiling, a store or tiled fireplace and plain but handsome staircase effect. At the back of the staircase is the arched entrance into dining room a long fine room, with a bay end and very pretty diamond paneled closets on each side of the entrance to the butler's pantry. A fireplace may be put in this room, at an additional expense. On the right of the hall is the parlor, done in white and light color, with an entrance to the side piazza, which can be turned into a very good sun parlor by enclosing it in glass. To the left is the library stained Flemish oak, with a mullioned bay with window seat and a red tiled fireplace with book shelves each side. This room has wainscot or shelves, and a wide book self around the top of wainscot. This room could be used as a bed room and even have a small bath attached. There is a large butler's pantry and a good closet room, the kitchen is convenient and next is a large combination laundry and servant's sitting room and dining room. Laundry tubs look all right covered with a table cover.

On the second floor are four bed rooms, a dressing room and two bathrooms. The closets are fine and the arrangement of rooms convenient for a family. The bedrooms are done in white porcelaine enamel. The bed rooms in white paint or chestnut stain. In the attic are two good sized rooms and one smaller one, a storeroom and if desired servant's bath. This last is not included in the estimate.

The interior finish is cypress or white wood. Floors Georgia pine on first main floor and N. C. pine on the balance.

Ceiling 9 feet 6 inches; first story—9 feet, second story. Width 56 feet. Depth 58 feet. Cellar cemented.

STRANGE FISH

Is Caught by Tennessee Man and Many Experts Say They Are Puzzled.

Kelso, who, with Mrs. Kelso, is spending ten days at Pass-a-Grille, Fla., hooked and landed a very beautiful fish, the name or species of which no one on the island has been able to determine.

A special in the Tampa Morning Tribune says: "Dr. Kelso and E. R. Burns, with J. A. Saunders as guide,

WIFE GETS FERVENT NOTES SENT HUSBAND

Typist Writes Love Letters to Engineer and a Separation Suit Follows.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Fervent love letters that ended up with urgent warnings to be careful and let no one see them, but which fell into the hands of the addressee's wife, led to a separation suit filed in the supreme court by Mrs. Byrd H. Mowery, who charges her husband with cruel treatment of herself and with undue attention to Miss Loretta Bean, a private secretary in the office of the Cleveland branch of the Ohio state industrial commission.

Allegations made by Mrs. Mowery are that her husband "shook a hatchet in her face and threatened to give her what Carlton gave his wife" (Porter Charlton, it will be recalled murdered his wife in Lake Como, Italy) that he bit her right shoulder "in a malicious and vicious manner" and on another occasion shook his fist in her face and told her "he would like to plant it between my eyes and see the blood spurt"; also that he threatened to "break my neck," and that he threw her on the stairway.

One of Miss Bean's letters to Mowery is quoted as saying: "Is it perfectly safe to correspond with you? I wouldn't have a third party find this out and start something. It would kill me. Is any one in the office getting wise? Give me a goodbye hug and a kiss. Good night, Harold, with heaps of love from Loretta."

Harold W. Mowery, who is a safety engineer of New York city, denies his wife's charges of cruelty and asserts the letters from Miss Bean are only such as a friend would write to another and were not penned in the spirit in which his wife interpreted them.

had caught about forty some-odd fine kingfish and were on the verge of returning to the land when suddenly the genial doctor realized the fact that he had hooked a wampus of some kind, and after a strenuous fight of at least fifteen minutes the strange fish was pulled into the boat. It weighed fifteen pounds and was shaped a good deal like a pompano and had the most beautiful scales ever seen on a fish, being of a changeable nature, varying from silver to gold, and the most peculiar feature of the entire fish was its tongue, which was exactly like a calf's with an oblong spot in the center, which was as rough as emery paper."
